Biography of Christian Gauss

Born on February 2, 1878, in Ann Arbor, Michigan, Christian Gauss was the son of German immigrants. Gauss attended the University of Michigan and later became an instructor there after graduating with an A.B. in 1898. In 1901, Gauss left Michigan to become Instructor of Modern Languages at Lehigh University. Gauss moved to Princeton in 1905 and became one of Woodrow Wilson's original preceptors. Two years later he was promoted to full professor. In 1912, Gauss became chairman of the Department of Modern Languages, a position he held until 1936. As a professor, Gauss became known for his lectures. He often drafted several versions, honing them to the point where he felt they could be delivered.

In 1925, he was appointed Dean of the College. Gauss, the professor and dean, was often described as being firm but fair. Students described his courses as being both rigorous and rewarding. He often invited students to his family's home to discuss intellectual or personal matters they may have been dealing with or simply to listen to sports on the radio. In 1929, Gauss was named first incumbent of a chair in modern languages endowed by his friends in the Class of 1900. Gauss was committed to Princeton University throughout his career, even beyond his professional responsibilities. He edited the Princeton Alumni Weekly, served as trustee and vice president of Princeton University Press, was chairman of the University Council on Athletics, and helped found and served as first chairman of the Creative Arts Council. He eventually retired from Princeton University in 1946 but remained active in alumni affairs until his death in 1951.

Gauss became one of the foremost voices on liberal education while at Princeton. He published articles and essays on the subject throughout his career. He also wrote extensively on literature, penning numerous critical essays and reviews, and he authored several books, including Life in College and A Primer For Tomorrow. Gauss also edited several works, such as The Teaching of Religion in American Higher Education, a collection of essays by prominent commentators on higher education.

Description

The collection consists of personal and professional writings, correspondence, printed documents, and other materials of Gauss. The bulk of the writings consist of annotated drafts for essays, lectures, and books he authored and edited. Also included are personal writings, such as diaries, notebooks, and unpublished poetry. The bulk of the correspondence is professional in nature. However, some personal correspondence with family members and close friends is included. The subjects of much of the correspondence pertains to his tenures as professor and dean at Princeton. Memorabilia, photographs, printed material, and miscellaneous ephemera Gauss collected, span his days in Ann Arbor and Princeton. Included here are group photographs, newspaper clippings, pamphlets, and calling cards. There are also some documents pertaining to Gauss's wife and family.

Series 1: Writings, 1892-1951

This series consists of the personal writings of Christian Gauss. It contains eight subseries. The first, Books, includes drafts, correspondence, newspaper clippings, and notes related to Gauss's books. The second, Diaries, includes daybooks and notebooks kept by Gauss. The third, Poetry, includes hand written and typed drafts of Gauss's poetry. The fourth, Book Reviews, includes hand written and typed drafts and printed copies of Gauss's book reviews, most of which were published. The fifth, Lectures, includes typed, annotated drafts and final copies of lectures delivered by Gauss while he was a lecturer at Princeton University. The sixth, Miscellaneous, includes various notes and fragments written by Gauss as Princeton University professor. The seventh, Published Articles, includes typed and annotated drafts of many of the articles Gauss published during his lifetime. The eighth, Speeches, includes handwritten and typed copies of speeches delivered by Gauss, primarily while he was Dean of the College.

Subseries 1A: Books, 1915-1951

This subseries consists of drafts, correspondence, newspaper clippings, and notes related to books written and edited by Christian Gauss. The bulk of the documents are annotated drafts. The correspondence is between Gauss, publishers, editors, and other authors. The bulk of the clippings are reviews.

Subseries 1B: Diaries, 1892-1942

This subseries consists of diaries in the form of daybooks, notebooks, and typed transcripts kept by Gauss. The daybooks contain brief descriptions of Gauss's daily activities. The notebooks were maintained by Gauss while he was at Princeton. Though Gauss did not make daily entries into the diaries, his entries are fairly lengthy. They cover everything from mundane topics, such as meals and daily chores, to Gauss's thoughts on his various intellectual pursuits. Gauss often discusses goings on at Princeton as well.

Subseries 1C: Poetry, undated

This subseries consists of both handwritten and typed drafts of poetry written by Gauss. All of the poetry is undated. Though there are numerous poems in typed, handwritten, and annotated forms, it is unclear when and how often Gauss wrote poetry and what plans he had for his poems.

Subseries 1D: Book Reviews, 1909-1945

This subseries consists of book reviews that Gauss wrote for various publications. The bulk of the documents are annotated typed drafts. Also included are copies of the published versions.

Subseries 1E: Lectures, 1912-1945

This subseries includes drafts of Gauss's lectures for various courses. The bulk of the drafts are dated and annotated.

Subseries 1F: Miscellaneous, 1911-1950

This subseries consists of miscellaneous writings, most of which are random notes and thoughts. A bulk of the notes relate to Princeton University or to ideas for Gauss's writings. Some unpublished articles and reviews are also included.

Subseries 1G: Published Articles, 1896-1951

This subseries consists of a majority of Gauss's articles published during his lifetime. The bulk of the materials are annotated drafts. Some published copies are also included. The files are divided into two groups: General and Ladies' Home Journal. The material in the Ladies' Home Journal group relate to a series of articles on the state of American higher educated that Gauss edited for the magazine.

Subseries 1H: Speeches, 1920-1951

This subseries consists of speeches written and delivered by Gauss. The speeches are divided into three groups: General, Phi Beta Kappa, and Princeton Alumni Associations. The bulk of the speeches note the date and location.

Series 2: Correspondence, 1900-1951

The series contains letters both to and from Gauss. Correspondents include family, friends, Princetonians, politicians, and various prominent intellectuals and authors. Notable correspondents include Pearl S. Buck, Allen Dulles, Albert Einstein, Dwight D. Eisenhower, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Sinclair Lewis, Edward R. Murrow, Ezra Pound, Will Rogers, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Alfred E. Smith, and Woodrow Wilson. The bulk of the letters relate to Gauss's professional relationships. Subjects of note include Princeton and higher education in America. In letters of a personal nature, Gauss not only discusses matters of family and business but also often offers his opinions on issues of the day, usually something related to civil liberties. Gauss also maintained a thirty-five year correspondence with his former pupil Edmund Wilson.

Series 3: Photographs, 1886-1946

Various photographs of Gauss and the Gauss family.

Series 4: Memorabilia, 1894-1951

The series contains memorabilia and ephemera collected by Gauss. The bulk of the material relates to meetings and appointments, much of it dating from Gauss's time in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Series 5: Miscellaneous Material, 1863-1951

The series contains a variety of documents related to various organizations and institutions associated with Gauss. The Princeton material consists of documents related to general administrative business. Subject matters include eating clubs, academic departments, student and university publications, and campus events. Teachers' Insurance and Annuity Association material is related to Gauss's tenure as Dean of Princeton.

Series 6: Printed Matter, 1922-1952

The series contains printed material. Documents include pamphlets on education and pamphlets and newspaper clippings related to World War II.

Series 7: Papers of Others, 1904-1951

The series contains documents created by family and associates of Gauss. The bulk of the documents are correspondence related to the Gauss family.

Series 2: Correspondence, 1900-1952 (26 boxes)Series Description

The series contains letters both to and from Gauss. Correspondents include family, friends, Princetonians, politicians, and various prominent intellectuals and authors. Notable correspondents include Pearl S. Buck, Allen Dulles, Albert Einstein, Dwight D. Eisenhower, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Sinclair Lewis, Edward R. Murrow, Ezra Pound, Will Rogers, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Alfred E. Smith, and Woodrow Wilson. The bulk of the letters relate to Gauss's professional relationships. Subjects of note include Princeton and higher education in America. In letters of a personal nature, Gauss not only discusses matters of family and business but also often offers his opinions on issues of the day, usually something related to civil liberties. Gauss also maintained a thirty-five year correspondence with his former pupil Edmund Wilson.
