Description

The Historical Photographs Collection -- Grounds and Buildings Photographs documents the enormous growth and change of the face of Princeton University's campus from the late 1850s to the present. Even the face of college campuses is fluid--buildings do not always stand permanently, nor remain in the same location. During this time a great number of buildings at Princeton were razed or destroyed by fire and replaced by new buildings; some of these buildings were subsequently demolished or moved to make way for even newer ones.

Buildings which were razed include: Philosophical Hall (1803-1873), the first Chapel (1847-1896), Bonner-Marquand Gymnasium (1869-1907), Carpenter Hall/House (undated-1909), East College (1833-1896), Halsted Observatory (1869-1932), Reunion Hall (1870-1965), University Hall (1876-1916), and Upper Pyne Building (1896-1963).

Buildings that were moved to other locations include Corwin Hall (originally called Wilson Hall), and the Joseph Henry House (which was moved three times, first in 1870, then in 1925, and again in 1946). A series of houses which served as faculty homes or rooming houses on Nassau St. (numbering 31 and 39, and 45, 49, and 51) were all moved in 1909 when the construction for Holder Hall was begun. Carpenter House/Hall (37 Nassau St.) was demolished at this time. President McCosh's post-presidency residence was moved from 103 Prospect St. to 391 Nassau St. in 1916.

Buildings lost to fires include: Dickinson Hall (1870) and Marquand Chapel (1882) both went up in flames in 1920; in 1924 the Casino (1895) burned; in 1928 the John C. Green School of Science (1873) and the Dynamo Building (1889) burned down; and in 1944 the University Gymnasium (1903) and the Brokaw Memorial (1892) caught on fire while U.S. soldiers were being housed in the gymnasium. Nassau Hall has also been a victim of fire several times since it was built in 1756.

A number of the grounds on campus are no longer in existence. The University Field was eliminated when the Engineering Quadrangle was built in 1962. The only remaining evidence of the field and its buildings and stands are the Ferris Thompson Gates on Prospect St., and the Third World Center which was built as the Osborn Field House. The area where Brokaw Field used to be is now the site of 27 tennis courts and the Mathey Tennis Pavilion (1961). The locations of several athletic fields have been changed: currently Clarke Field, Strubing Field, Finney Field, Campbell Field, and Sexton Field now stands where Laughlin Field once stood. Bedford Field moved from its original location to its present location in 1986, and Lourie-Love Field took its place.

Many other elements of the campus have changed. The Drinking Fountain no longer exists on campus; the Bulletin Elm was cut down in 1888. The Princeton Student Monument (a.k.a., the Christian Student, c1880), is now inside Jadwin Gymnasium. The first Boat House was probably destroyed when the Class of 1877 Boat House was built in 1912, and the vast areas of open land that can be seen in the campus views of the 1860 and 1870s stretching out beyond Prospect House are now filled with residential subdivisions, corporate buildings and roadways.

Over the years both the name and function of many buildings on campus changed. An important distinction is to be made between the name of a building and its function. It is the name of a building and the date(s) of construction and alteration that are the key aspects for this collection. Photographs relating to the function of buildings, including photographs of students engaged in activities connected to or relevant to a specific building have been removed to the Campus Life series of the Historical Photograph Collection. Photographs which were removed include photographs of dormitory rooms, dedication ceremonies of buildings, and student activities including sports, clubs, and social events.

Duplicates of photographs post-dating 1880 have been discarded, unless the quality of different photographs necessitated keeping more than one copy. Multiple copies of photographs pre-dating 1880 have been retained. Copy negatives have been discarded as well, unless no original photograph exists.

Photographs relating to Princeton Borough have been removed and given to the Historical Society of Princeton. Researchers interested in photographs of the Princeton Borough and surrounding areas not owned by Princeton University should contact the Historical Society of Princeton.

Series 1: Grounds and Buildings Photographs

Arrangement

Photographs in Series 1: Grounds and Buildings are arranged first according to size of photograph: Small photographs are those that measure 5x7" or smaller; Medium photographs are those that measure 11x14" or smaller; and Large photographs are those that measure 16x20" or smaller. Within each of these sizes the photographs are arranged alphabetically by name of building and ground. Photographs have then been placed in as close to chronological order as possible. Main entry: Photographs of buildings and grounds may be located by using the main entry, which is the formal, or proper, name of the building. Cross references are provided for alternate names for buildings, which are often less formal or more commonly used names. For example, photographs of Henry Hall or 1904 Hall will not found under the headings Henry Hall or 1904 Hall, but will be found under the entry of "Class of 1904-Henry Hall." Cross-references: Cross references are given in the form of "See:" references and "See also:" references. "See:" references point to the location of the items. "See also:" references point to additional locations in which other photographs of the building or ground may be found. Change of name and function: Buildings have been arranged in the collection according to their most recent name. Previous names are listed under this main entry. For example, photographs of Pyne Library will be found under the heading of East Pyne. Cross references have been provided for previously used names, as well as other names by which the buildings and grounds are known. In cases in which the function of the building has changed, the change has been noted within the main entry for the building. Only in some cases is the function of a building given as a related entry. This occurs mainly when the building has been commonly referred to by its function, rather than by its name. (A name authority list is found at the end of this register.) Dates: The dates given after the name of a building are the original dates of construction. If a building was altered or additions were made, those dates are given after the construction date. In some cases, dates are given in parentheses. This indicates the date span of a function of a building or ground. For example, dates given after all of the Eating Clubs are in parentheses. These dates refer to the period in which the Eating Club was in existence, not the dates of the building. (We don't seem to know all of the dates for the different buildings, and many Eating Clubs have had more than one building.) The various sources that can be consulted on the history of buildings at Princeton University often provide contradictory information for the original date of many buildings. In most cases, the variation in dating can be attributed to the difference of opinion over whether it is the date of construction, dedication, or occupation which constitutes the original date of the building. In the case of some older buildings acquired by the University the date of construction is not known [i.e. Faculty Housing -- 31 Nassau St. (Guyot (Arnold) House, 1901 acquired by PU; 1901 sold to Mrs. Horatio W. Turner and moved to 8 Greenholm)]. Types of buildings or grounds: Most photographs of buildings and grounds appear under the name of the individual building and ground. Exceptions are those buildings, or groups of buildings, and grounds that fall under certain categories. These include: Boat Houses, Chapels, Faculty Housing, Gymnasiums, Libraries, Observatories, Sculpture, and Tennis Courts. Another category of photographs is identified as "Campus Views." These photographs are comprised of photographs that show more than one building on campus, and thus provide a "view." The "Campus Views" have been divided into different geographical areas: Aerial Views; Front Campus (Front, West, East, and Towards Nassau St.); Middle Campus (Middle, West, and East); South Campus; and Storm Pictures. A map demonstrating these divisions can be found at the end of this description.

Maps which represent the campus at different periods of time may be found in the General Catalogue of Princeton University (located in the reference room), the Historical Subject Files -- Grounds and Buildings Collection [AC110], the book Princeton University Land, 1756-1984 (1986) by Gerald Breese, Princeton Architecture (1967) by Constance Grieff, and in the Archives' Map Collection (AC113). In some cases lists of types of buildings and grounds will be provided as a means of reference only. The actual photographs will be located under the name of the individual building or area. These include: archways, gateways, fields (athletic), Eating Clubs, and residential colleges (with the exception of Wilson College for which there are photographs of the entire residential college). Researchers will find a way through the collection by using the detailed authority list and box listings for the small, medium, large and oversize photographs. The authority list provides an exhaustive list of all of the buildings and grounds for which there are photographs, and additionally lists those buildings for which there are no photographs. In the latter instance, the phrase "no photographs" appears after the main entry. The box listings identify specific boxes in which photographs of buildings may be found. Negatives have not been separated, and may be found in all three size boxes.

Series 2: Grounds and Buildings Additions

Series Description

The Grounds and Buildings Additions series consists of photographs that have been added to the collection since the time of its original processing in the mid-1990s.

Arrangement

Photographs in the Grounds and Buildings series are grouped into two categories, Buildings and Sculpture and Grounds. Within these categories, photographs are arranged alphabetically by subject.
